Model Answers

1. TOU-01 — What benefits does tourism bring?

Tourism is an important industry in many countries. What benefits do you think tourism brings to individuals and society?

Essay type	Double Question — List + List (individuals + society)
Position	No opinion is asked for. Individuals gain rest and cultural knowledge; society gains jobs and better infrastructure.
Ideas from Idea Bank (Part 3)	International Tourism: Benefits
Structure	Double Question guide (List + List): Answer 1 + answer 2 → BP1 = Q1, List block (P E X P E L) → BP2 = Q2, List block (P E X P E L) → Both answers in new words
Reused from Idea Bank	6 sentences (highlighted)
Word count	Intro 31 · BP1 100 · BP2 104 · Conclusion 31 · Total 266

Introduction · 31 words

Tourism has become one of the most important industries in many countries. It gives individuals rest and a broader view of the world, and it brings society jobs and better infrastructure.

Body Paragraph 1 · 100 words

Point One of the main benefits of travel for individuals is the chance to rest. Explain It allows people to relax, escape from daily stress and enjoy new experiences. Example For example, an office worker who spends a week by the sea after a busy year may return to work calmer and more productive, and this also benefits her health. Point Another important benefit is that travel teaches people about other cultures. Explain When tourists visit a country, they learn about its history, traditions, food and way of life. Link Consequently, many people remember their journeys as some of the most valuable experiences of their lives.

Body Paragraph 2 · 104 words

Point One of the main benefits for society is employment. Explain Tourism creates jobs for hotel staff, tour guides, drivers, cooks, artists and craftspeople, many of whom may have limited opportunities in other industries. Example For instance, a young man in Cox's Bazar who becomes a tour guide can earn a steady income without moving to Dhaka, which keeps his family together and supports the local economy. Point Another important benefit is better infrastructure. Explain To attract visitors, governments often invest in roads, airports, electricity, water supply and communication networks. Link Consequently, these improvements also benefit local residents, making it easier for them to travel, run businesses and access services.

Conclusion · 31 words

In conclusion, tourism helps individuals to relax and understand other cultures more deeply. It also creates jobs and encourages investment in roads and public services, which improves life for whole communities.

2. TOU-02 — More flights: environmental problems and solutions

As a result of tourism and the increasing number of people travelling, there is a growing demand for more flights. What problems does this cause for the environment? What measures could be taken to solve the problems?

Essay type	Problem and Solution
Position	Problems: high carbon emissions and damage near airports. Solutions: fair environmental taxes; high-speed trains for shorter journeys.
Ideas from Idea Bank (Part 3)	Ch. 03 Environment Idea Bank: Air Travel, Tourism and the Environment (the Environment sheet answers TOU-09 and TOU-10 on the same topic)
Structure	Cause/Problem + Solution guide: 2 causes or problems + 2 solutions → BP1 (P E X P E L) → BP2, each solution fixing one point (N E X N E L) → Same ideas in new words
Reused from Idea Bank	7 sentences (highlighted)
Word count	Intro 35 · BP1 107 · BP2 113 · Conclusion 30 · Total 285

Introduction · 35 words

As tourism expands, the demand for air travel continues to rise around the world. This growth increases carbon emissions and damages areas near airports, but fair environmental taxes and high-speed trains can reduce these effects.

Body Paragraph 1 · 107 words

Point The most serious environmental problem caused by this growth is the high level of carbon emissions. Explain Aeroplanes burn large amounts of fuel, and there are few clean alternatives for long-distance flights at present. Example For example, a tourist who takes one long-distance return flight can produce as much carbon as several months of driving, and this damage grows as more people travel. Point Another problem is the harm that airports cause to the areas around them. Explain They create noise pollution for nearby residents and take up large areas of land, which may once have been farmland or forest. Link Consequently, more flights damage both the global climate and local communities.

Body Paragraph 2 · 113 words

Solution The most effective way to reduce these emissions is to introduce fair environmental taxes, especially for people who fly very frequently. Explain Higher prices could reduce unnecessary flights, and the money raised could be invested in clean energy. Example For instance, a business traveller who pays more for every extra trip may replace some meetings with online calls, which reduces emissions without affecting families who rarely fly. Solution In addition, governments could invest in high-speed trains for shorter journeys. Explain When passengers have a fast and comfortable alternative, short flights become less necessary, so airports cause less noise and need less new land. Link Together, these measures would allow people to travel while causing far less environmental damage.

Conclusion · 30 words

In conclusion, rising demand for flights harms the climate and the communities living near airports. Well-designed taxes and better rail connections would limit this damage without preventing people from travelling.

3. TOU-03 — Eco-tourism and local communities

Eco-tourism usually involves people visiting remote areas. Some people think this will have a negative impact on local cultures and communities. What problems can result from eco-tourism? What measures can be taken to protect local culture and communities?

Essay type	Problem and Solution
Position	Problems: culture turned into a product and rising costs for residents. Solutions: community control over tourism; more local jobs and income.
Ideas from Idea Bank (Part 3)	Tourism and Local Communities
Structure	Cause/Problem + Solution guide: 2 causes or problems + 2 solutions → BP1 (P E X P E L) → BP2, each solution fixing one point (N E X N E L) → Same ideas in new words
Reused from Idea Bank	6 sentences (highlighted)
Word count	Intro 37 · BP1 101 · BP2 113 · Conclusion 32 · Total 283

Introduction · 37 words

Eco-tourism brings visitors to remote areas, and many people worry about its impact on local life. It can turn culture into a product and raise living costs, but community planning and local jobs can reduce these effects.

Body Paragraph 1 · 101 words

Point One major concern is that tourism can turn local culture into a commercial product. Explain Traditional dances, ceremonies and crafts may be performed or produced mainly to entertain tourists, losing their original meaning. Example For example, a sacred ritual may be shortened and repeated several times a day for visitors, becoming more of a show than a spiritual event. Point Another problem is the economic pressure on local residents. Explain When tourism grows rapidly, the cost of land, housing and food may rise, making life more expensive for local residents. Link Consequently, local communities may lose their traditions without receiving a fair share of the income.

Body Paragraph 2 · 113 words

Solution The most effective solution is to give local people control over how their culture is presented. Explain Local communities should be involved in planning and decision-making, so that tourism meets their needs and respects their values. Example For instance, a hill village that decides when visitors can watch its ceremonies can protect their meaning, which keeps them spiritual rather than commercial. Solution In addition, tour companies could employ more people from the local area. Explain Training local people as guides, cooks and hosts ensures that more of the income stays in the community, which helps residents to afford rising prices. Link Together, these measures would allow visitors to enjoy remote areas without harming the people who live there.

Conclusion · 32 words

In conclusion, eco-tourism can commercialise traditions and make daily life more expensive for residents. Giving communities a real voice and more of the income would protect both their culture and their livelihoods.

4. TOU-04 — Will travel programmes replace real travel?

With more people choosing to watch travel programmes on TV and social media, fewer people will be willing to pay the costs of travelling abroad. To what extent do you agree?

Essay type	Agree / Disagree
Position	I completely disagree.
Ideas from Idea Bank (Part 3)	International Tourism: Benefits · Ch. 03 Environment Idea Bank: Air Travel, Tourism and the Environment
Structure	Agree/Disagree guide: Opinion + 2 ideas → BP1 Idea 1 (P E E X L) → BP2 Idea 2 (P E X R L) → Opinion + 2 ideas in new words
Reused from Idea Bank	2 sentences (highlighted)
Word count	Intro 45 · BP1 107 · BP2 109 · Conclusion 39 · Total 300

Introduction · 45 words

It is sometimes claimed that, as more people watch travel programmes on television and social media, fewer will pay to travel overseas. I completely disagree with this view because a screen cannot replace real travel and these programmes often make people more eager to visit.

Body Paragraph 1 · 107 words

Point The main reason why I disagree with this idea is that a screen cannot replace real travel. Explain This is because watching a video cannot replace the real experience of tasting local food, meeting people and seeing famous places in person. Explain Travel also involves all the senses and unexpected moments; as a result, a programme can only show a small part of what a place is like. Example For example, a family can watch a documentary about Paris, but they cannot walk along its streets, and this is why many still want to go. Link Therefore, a travel programme can never remove the wish to experience these places in person.

Body Paragraph 2 · 109 words

Point Another important reason for my disagreement is that these programmes often make people more eager to travel. Explain When viewers see beautiful places on a screen, they often want to see them for themselves, so these programmes act as free advertising for tourism. Example For instance, after watching videos of the Sundarbans, many young people plan trips to see the forest for themselves, which brings more visitors to the area. Response Although some people argue that travel is too expensive, cheaper flights, higher incomes and the growth of the tourism industry mean that millions of people now fly abroad every year. Link Consequently, these programmes will not reduce people's desire to travel abroad.

Conclusion · 39 words

In conclusion, I firmly believe that travel shows will not stop people from paying to go abroad. Watching a video is very different from being there in person, and attractive images also inspire viewers to plan their own trips.

5. TOU-05 — Should tourism be banned to protect local culture?

Some people believe that, to protect local culture, tourism should be banned in some areas, while others think that change is inevitable and banning tourism will have no benefits. Discuss both sides and give your opinion.

Essay type	Discussion (both views + opinion)
Position	Banning tourism would bring no benefits.
Ideas from Idea Bank (Part 3)	Tourism and Local Communities · International Tourism: Benefits
Structure	Discuss Both Views guide: Both views + clean opinion → BP1 the other view (P E E X L) → BP2 my view (P E X R L) → Both themes + opinion in new words
Reused from Idea Bank	5 sentences (highlighted)
Word count	Intro 40 · BP1 105 · BP2 109 · Conclusion 42 · Total 296

Introduction · 40 words

While some people argue that tourism should be banned in certain areas to protect local culture, others believe that change is unavoidable and that such bans bring no benefits. I completely support the latter view because communities need tourist income.

Body Paragraph 1 · 105 words

Point On the one hand, people who support bans argue that contact with large numbers of visitors may encourage young people to copy foreign fashions, behaviour and consumer habits. Explain Tourists who do not respect local customs, for example by wearing inappropriate clothing at religious sites or behaving loudly, can cause offence and tension. Explain Traditions are also changed to please visitors; as a result, they may lose their meaning. Example For example, a village dance performed only for tourists may slowly lose its original meaning, and this is a real loss to the community. Link For this reason, many people believe that tourism should be banned in these areas.

Body Paragraph 2 · 109 words

Point On the other hand, I firmly believe that a ban would bring no benefits because banning tourism would remove important income and opportunities from poor communities. Explain When local communities see that tourists are interested in their traditions, crafts and natural environment, they may feel prouder of their heritage and more motivated to protect it. Example For instance, a local guide who earns money from visitors has a strong reason to keep traditions alive, which helps young people to value their culture. Response Although some people argue that tourists damage traditions, local culture will change anyway through television and the internet. Link Consequently, banning tourism would harm local people without protecting their culture.

Conclusion · 42 words

In conclusion, people hold different views on whether banning tourism is the right way to protect local culture. While careless visitors can cause offence, I firmly believe that bans bring no benefits because they remove income and reduce pride in local traditions.

6. TOU-06 — Protecting historical sites from tourism

As a result of tourism, some historical buildings and sites are being damaged beyond repair. What could be done to prevent this?

Essay type	Solutions only (Cause/Problem + Solution guide, Section 14)
Position	No opinion is asked for. Governments and site managers should limit visitor numbers and use entrance fees for careful restoration.
Ideas from Idea Bank (Part 3)	Tourism and Historical Sites
Structure	Cause/Problem + Solution guide, Section 14: both answers in one sentence → BP1 Solution 1 (N E E X L) → BP2 Solution 2 (N E E X L) → Same ideas in new words, no opinion
Reused from Idea Bank	4 sentences (highlighted)
Word count	Intro 33 · BP1 105 · BP2 93 · Conclusion 33 · Total 264

Introduction · 33 words

As tourism grows, some historical buildings and sites are being damaged beyond repair. Site managers can tackle this by limiting visitor numbers, and governments can help by using entrance fees for careful restoration.

Body Paragraph 1 · 105 words

Solution The most effective solution is for governments and site managers to control the number of visitors. Explain The sheer number of visitors can cause physical wear: millions of feet walking on ancient floors and stairs gradually wear them down, and people touching walls, carvings and paintings can damage delicate surfaces. Explain Governments can limit the number of visitors allowed at one time, for example through timed tickets or daily quotas. Example For example, if an ancient mosque allows only a few hundred visitors an hour through timed tickets, its floors and carvings suffer far less wear each day. Link Consequently, fewer feet and hands would touch these fragile places.

Body Paragraph 2 · 93 words

Solution In addition, governments could use entrance fees to repair and protect historical sites. Explain Money from entrance fees can be used for maintenance, restoration and research. Explain Higher fees for foreign tourists, as used in many countries, can raise extra funds while keeping access affordable for local people. Example For instance, the money from foreign visitors' tickets at an old fort could pay skilled workers to repair its cracked walls and roof, which would stop the damage before it becomes permanent. Link Together, these measures would protect our heritage for future generations to see, study and enjoy.

Conclusion · 33 words

In conclusion, the damage that tourism does to historical sites can be reduced if visitor numbers are carefully controlled. Spending ticket income on expert repairs would also keep these places standing for centuries.

7. TOU-07 — Should travellers adapt to local customs?

Some people think that when a person travels to a different culture they should adapt to the local practices and customs. To what extent do you agree?

Essay type	Agree / Disagree

Ideas from Idea Bank (Part 3)	Adapting to Local Customs and Cultural Tolerance (planned in Part 2F)

Reused from Idea Bank	5 sentences (highlighted)
Word count	Intro 40 · BP1 104 · BP2 114 · Conclusion 36 · Total 294

Introduction · 40 words

It is often argued that people who visit another culture should follow its customs and way of life. I completely agree with this view because adapting shows respect for local people and it also gives visitors a better travel experience.

Body Paragraph 1 · 104 words

Point The main reason why I agree with this idea is that adapting shows respect for local people. Explain This is because every society has its own rules about dress, greetings, food, religious practices and social behaviour. Explain When visitors follow these rules, they show respect for their hosts and avoid causing offence; as a result, relations between tourists and local people become more friendly. Example For example, tourists visiting a mosque in Bangladesh are expected to dress modestly and remove their shoes, and those who do so avoid offending local worshippers. Link Therefore, following local customs is a basic form of good manners that every traveller should show.

Body Paragraph 2 · 114 words

Point Another important reason for my agreement is that adapting gives visitors a better travel experience. Explain When travellers make an effort, they are rewarded, as visitors who learn a few words of the local language, try local food and follow local manners are often welcomed more warmly. Example For instance, a tourist who learns to greet people in Bangla may be invited to a family meal, which teaches them far more about the culture than any hotel can. Response Although some people argue that adapting means giving up one's own identity, visitors can respect local customs in public behaviour while keeping their own beliefs, values and traditions in private. Link Consequently, adapting benefits both travellers and their hosts.

Conclusion · 36 words

In conclusion, I firmly believe that travellers should follow the practices of the places they visit. This behaviour demonstrates respect for the host community, and it also opens the door to more meaningful friendships and experiences.

8. LAN-01 — Are translation apps making language learning pointless?

As computers translate quickly and accurately, learning foreign languages is a waste of time. To what extent do you agree or disagree?

Essay type	Agree / Disagree

Reused from Idea Bank	7 sentences (highlighted)
Word count	Intro 43 · BP1 106 · BP2 119 · Conclusion 36 · Total 304

Introduction · 43 words

It is sometimes claimed that learning a foreign language is a waste of time because computers can now translate quickly and accurately. I completely disagree with this view because machines cannot replace human language skills and language learning brings career and cultural benefits.

Body Paragraph 1 · 106 words

Point The main reason why I disagree with this idea is that machines cannot fully replace human language skills. Explain This is because translation apps still make mistakes, especially with complex sentences, idioms and cultural meanings. Explain Relying on a machine cannot build the same trust and relationship as speaking directly to someone in their language; as a result, important business and personal conversations can suffer. Example For example, a business owner who talks to a foreign partner only through a phone app may never build a friendly relationship, and this can cost them an important contract. Link Therefore, even though translation apps are useful, they cannot replace real language skills.

Body Paragraph 2 · 119 words

Point Another important reason for my disagreement is that language learning brings career and cultural benefits. Explain When people speak another language, they have more opportunities, because employers in international companies, tourism, diplomacy, trade and many other fields value employees who can communicate with foreign clients and partners. Example For instance, a Bangladeshi graduate who speaks good English may get a job with an international company and work with foreign clients, which also helps them to understand another way of life. Response Although some people argue that apps can now translate text and speech almost instantly, learning a language is a way to understand another culture. Link Consequently, language learning is not a waste of time but an investment in personal and professional growth.

Conclusion · 36 words

In conclusion, I firmly believe that studying foreign languages remains worthwhile in spite of modern translation software.

Technology cannot match the accuracy and trust of human speakers, and language ability also improves careers and cultural understanding.

9. LAN-02 — One global language: positive or negative?

Scientists predict that all people will choose to speak the same global language in the future. Do you think this is a positive or negative development?

Essay type	Advantages vs Disadvantages — Type 3 (positive or negative?)
Position	This is a negative development, so the advantages go first in the Although and While sentences and the disadvantages go after the comma.
Ideas from Idea Bank (Part 3)	English as a Global Language and Language Loss · this essay also answers TOU-08, which asks about the advantages and disadvantages of one world language
Structure	Adv/Disadv guide: Although-intro → BP1 advantages (7 sentences) → BP2 disadvantages (7 sentences) → While-conclusion
Reused from Idea Bank	6 sentences (highlighted)
Word count	Intro 48 · BP1 133 · BP2 134 · Conclusion 43 · Total 358

Introduction · 48 words

Scientists predict that, in the future, everyone will choose to speak the same global language. Although one language could ease international communication and widen career opportunities, it would destroy minority languages and give native speakers an unfair advantage. In my view, this development brings more drawbacks than benefits.

Body Paragraph 1 · 133 words

Topic There is little doubt that a single global language offers considerable advantages to people everywhere. Point To begin with, the most significant benefit is that it makes international communication much easier. Explain This is because business people from different countries can negotiate deals, scientists can share research and tourists can travel more easily. Example For example, a Bangladeshi engineer and a Brazilian engineer who share one language can work on the same project without a translator, which saves time. Point In addition, a common language not only helps nations cooperate but also opens up career opportunities for individuals. Explain As a result of sharing one language, students could easily reach higher education abroad and a vast amount of information online, which improves their prospects. Summary Overall, a shared language would make the world more connected and full of opportunities.

Body Paragraph 2 · 134 words

Topic On the other hand, it cannot be denied that this development also has some drawbacks. Point Firstly, minority communities experience language loss when young people see a global language as the key to success. Explain Without daily use, these languages fade; as a result, children may then grow up unable to speak the language of their grandparents. Example For instance, indigenous teenagers in the hill tracts who study only in Bangla may forget their own language, which weakens their identity. Point Secondly, inequality can be a serious obstacle, as a single global language could also give an unfair advantage to native English speakers. Explain If people cannot speak this language well, they may be excluded from opportunities and, consequently, fall behind. Summary Although some people would gain from easier communication, these cultural and economic losses would damage the world's diversity.

Conclusion · 43 words

In conclusion, a future in which all humans speak one tongue is a real possibility. While such a language could connect nations and widen opportunities, it would wipe out minority languages and favour native speakers. Overall, I believe this is a negative development.

10. LAN-04 — Can you understand a culture without its language?

Some people think that a person can never understand the culture of a country unless they speak the language. Do you agree with this opinion?

Reused from Idea Bank	2 sentences (highlighted)
Word count	Intro 39 · BP1 109 · BP2 119 · Conclusion 39 · Total 306

Introduction · 39 words

It is sometimes claimed that nobody can ever understand a country's culture without speaking its language. I completely disagree with this view because culture can be learned through daily life and translated books and films also make it accessible.

Body Paragraph 1 · 109 words

Point The main reason why I disagree with this idea is that culture can be learned through daily life. Explain This is because people can learn a great deal about a culture through its food, music, art, festivals and history. Explain Many cultural values are shown through actions and not words; as a result, a visitor can understand them simply by watching and taking part. Example For example, a foreigner who lives in Dhaka for a year, eats local food and celebrates Eid with Bangladeshi friends can understand many local values without speaking fluent Bangla, and this is a genuine form of understanding. Link Therefore, language is not the only door to another culture.

Body Paragraph 2 · 119 words

Point Another important reason for my disagreement is that translated books and films also make culture accessible. Explain When people watch foreign films or read translated novels, they can explore another society, as streaming also gives audiences access to films and series from many countries, which can broaden their cultural understanding. Example For instance, a Bangladeshi student who reads Japanese novels in translation may learn a lot about family life and values in Japan, which would otherwise be impossible. Response Although some people argue that jokes, idioms, literature and many social customs depend on language, missing a few jokes does not prevent someone from understanding a culture's main values. Link Consequently, it is wrong to say that foreigners can never understand a country's culture.

Conclusion · 39 words

In conclusion, I firmly believe that speaking the local language is not necessary for understanding a country's culture. Direct experience of its customs teaches a great deal, and translated works also give outsiders a clear view of its values.

11. LAN-05 — Can you become fluent without living abroad?

Some people think that you can never become fluent in a language unless you have spent time living or working in that country. To what extent do you agree?

Essay type	Agree / Disagree
Position	I completely disagree.

Reused from Idea Bank	2 sentences (highlighted)
Word count	Intro 44 · BP1 115 · BP2 100 · Conclusion 35 · Total 294

Introduction · 44 words

It is sometimes claimed that nobody can become fluent in a language without living or working in a country where it is spoken. I completely disagree with this view because modern technology allows daily practice at home and living abroad does not guarantee fluency.

Body Paragraph 1 · 115 words

Point The main reason why I disagree with this idea is that modern technology allows daily practice at home. Explain This is because, with online resources, films, music and conversation partners available on the internet, many people now reach a high level without leaving their own country. Explain Learners can watch films with subtitles and talk to native speakers through video calls; as a result, they can hear natural language every day. Example For example, a Bangladeshi student who watches English films and talks to native speakers by video call may achieve a high IELTS score without ever travelling abroad, and this shows that location is not the deciding factor. Link Therefore, people can become fluent in their own country.

Body Paragraph 2 · 100 words

Point Another important reason for my disagreement is that living abroad does not guarantee fluency. Explain When people move to a new country, they do not always use the language, as many spend most of their time with people from their own country. Example For instance, a worker who lives abroad for years may work and live with other Bangladeshis, which means that their English remains very basic. Response Although some people argue that living abroad certainly provides constant practice and exposure, this practice helps only those who make an effort to use it. Link Consequently, effort and daily practice matter much more than location.

Conclusion · 35 words

In conclusion, I firmly believe that learners do not have to live overseas to become fluent. Digital tools now make regular practice possible from home, and moving abroad also brings little progress without personal effort.

12. LAN-06 — Should all children learn a foreign language early?

Some people think that all children in school should learn a foreign language at an early age. What are the advantages and disadvantages of doing this?

Ideas from Idea Bank (Part 3)	Learning Foreign Languages · English as a Global Language and Language Loss
Structure	Adv/Disadv guide: Although-intro → BP1 advantages (7 sentences) → BP2 disadvantages (7 sentences) → While-conclusion
Reused from Idea Bank	3 sentences (highlighted)
Word count	Intro 38 · BP1 128 · BP2 135 · Conclusion 32 · Total 333

Introduction · 38 words

Some people believe that every child should begin learning a foreign language at primary school. Although early lessons may confuse young learners and are often taught by untrained teachers, they also improve pronunciation and open future career opportunities.

Body Paragraph 1 · 128 words

Topic There is little doubt that early foreign language lessons offer considerable advantages to children. Point To begin with, the most significant benefit is better pronunciation, since children learn languages more easily than adults. Explain This is because their brains are more flexible and they are less afraid of making mistakes. Example For example, a child who starts English at six usually speaks more naturally than an adult beginner, and this gives her lasting confidence. Point In addition, learning a foreign language not only improves career prospects but also helps people understand other cultures. Explain As a result of starting early, pupils can reach a high level by the end of school, which helps them win places at foreign universities. Summary Overall, early language learning prepares children for both clear communication and a global future.

Body Paragraph 2 · 135 words

Topic On the other hand, it cannot be denied that early language teaching also has some drawbacks. Point Firstly, many young pupils experience confusion when they learn two languages before mastering their mother tongue. Explain Without a strong base in their first language, they often mix up words and spelling; as a result, their reading and writing may develop slowly. Example For instance, a seven-year-old who studies Bangla and English at the same time may confuse the two alphabets, which can make her lose confidence. Point Secondly, a shortage of trained teachers can be a serious obstacle, as many village schools cannot hire language specialists. Explain If pupils are taught by teachers with poor pronunciation, they may learn mistakes and, consequently, find them hard to correct later. Summary Overall, these learning and staffing problems can reduce the value of early language lessons.

Conclusion · 32 words

In conclusion, teaching languages to young children is increasingly popular. While it may confuse young pupils and suffer from a lack of skilled teachers, it improves pronunciation and widens children's future choices.

13. SOC-05 — Globalisation: advantages and disadvantages

Globalisation has both advantages and disadvantages. Discuss both and give your opinion.

Structure	Adv/Disadv guide: Although-intro → BP1 advantages (7 sentences) → BP2 disadvantages (7 sentences) → While-conclusion

Introduction · 46 words

Globalisation, the growing connection between countries through trade, technology and culture, has changed the world. Although it can force local shops to close and weaken traditional cultures, it also creates jobs and spreads useful knowledge. In my opinion, the advantages of globalisation clearly outweigh the disadvantages.

Body Paragraph 1 · 134 words

Topic There is little doubt that globalisation offers considerable advantages to people in developing countries. Point To begin with, the most significant benefit is economic growth, because when countries trade freely, businesses can sell their products to much larger markets. Explain This is because selling to foreign buyers brings in money, which creates jobs and raises incomes. Example For example, Bangladesh's garment industry, which exports clothes all over the world, employs millions of people, and many of them are women. Point In addition, globalisation not only spreads knowledge and technology but also gives consumers a wider choice of products at lower prices. Explain As a result of this exchange, medical advances, new farming techniques, renewable energy and digital tools can quickly reach countries around the world. Summary Overall, global trade and cooperation help poorer nations become richer, healthier and better connected.

Body Paragraph 2 · 134 words

Topic On the other hand, it cannot be denied that globalisation also has some drawbacks. Point Firstly, many local traders suffer, as multinational companies with huge budgets can dominate markets, forcing small local businesses to close. Explain Without the money to compete on price, family firms often lose customers; as a result, their owners lose their income. Example For instance, a small grocery shop may lose its customers when an international supermarket opens nearby, which leaves the owner in debt. Point Secondly, cultural homogenisation can be a serious problem, as global brands, Western films and international fast food spread everywhere. Explain If young people follow only global trends, they may neglect their own festivals and, consequently, some local customs and smaller languages may disappear. Summary Although these economic and cultural challenges are real, fair laws and cultural programmes can reduce them.

Conclusion · 44 words

In conclusion, closer links between nations are now part of modern life. While global markets may harm small businesses and local customs, they bring jobs, cheaper goods and new technology to developing countries. Therefore, I firmly believe that the benefits far outweigh the drawbacks.

14. SOC-07 — Should we keep traditional ways of life?

With the development of modern society comes the loss of traditional ways of life. Is it important to keep our traditional ways of life? How can this be achieved?

Word count	Intro 33 · BP1 95 · BP2 106 · Conclusion 35 · Total 269

Introduction · 33 words

Modern development is causing many traditional ways of life to disappear. I firmly believe that keeping these traditions is important, and schools and families can help to pass them on to young people.

Body Paragraph 1 · 95 words

Point I firmly believe that keeping traditional ways of life is important because they are an essential part of a nation's identity.

Explain Festivals, music, crafts, food and language connect people to their history and give them a sense of belonging. Example For example, festivals such as Pohela Boishakh in Bangladesh bring people of different ages and backgrounds together and strengthen community ties. Response Although some people argue that old customs slow down progress, a country can modernise without losing the traditions that make it unique. Link Therefore, losing these traditions would mean losing an important link with our past.

Body Paragraph 2 · 106 words

Solution The most effective way is for schools to teach traditional culture. Explain When schools include local history, folk music and traditional crafts in lessons and organise cultural events, children learn to value their heritage from an early age. Example For instance, a pupil who learns to play a folk instrument for a school festival may keep playing it as an adult, which keeps that music alive. Solution In addition, families could pass on traditions at home. Explain When parents celebrate festivals together and speak their mother tongue at home, children grow up seeing these customs as part of daily life. Link Together, these measures would help traditions survive alongside modern life.

Conclusion · 35 words

In conclusion, I firmly believe that traditional ways of life are worth keeping because they give people a sense of identity. Cultural education at school and everyday practice at home would ensure that they survive.

15. SOC-08 — Passing history on: how and why?

Every culture, throughout time, has recorded its history in one way or another. In what ways can history be passed on to the next generation? Why is history important to society?

Essay type	Double Question — List + List (ways + importance)

Word count	Intro 31 · BP1 93 · BP2 118 · Conclusion 31 · Total 273

Introduction · 31 words

Every culture records its history in some way. History can be passed on through families and schools, and it matters because it builds identity and helps societies learn from the past.

Body Paragraph 1 · 93 words

Point One important way of passing on history is through the family. Explain When grandparents and parents share their memories with children, the past becomes personal, so young people remember it more easily. Example For example, in Bangladesh, many families share memories of the Liberation War of 1971, keeping the experiences of that generation alive. Point Another important way is through schools. Explain Schools play a central role through history lessons, which teach students about their nation's past and the wider world. Link Consequently, history passes from one generation to the next both at home and in the classroom.

Body Paragraph 2 · 118 words

Point One of the main reasons why history is important is that it gives people a sense of identity and belonging. Explain When people know how their nation was formed, they understand its culture, values and traditions, so they feel proud to belong to it. Example For instance, International Mother Language Day on 21 February, which began in Bangladesh, reminds people of the sacrifices made during the Language Movement and the importance of linguistic rights. Point Another important reason is that history allows societies to learn from the past. Explain By studying wars, injustices and mistakes, as well as successes and achievements, people can make better decisions in the future. Link Consequently, a society that knows its history is better prepared for its future.

Conclusion · 31 words

In conclusion, families and schools are the main ways in which history reaches young people. It matters because it gives people a shared identity and helps societies avoid repeating past mistakes.

16. SOC-09 — Why are music and art important?

All societies have their own music and art. In what ways are music and art important for society and for the individual?

Introduction · 32 words

Every society, rich or poor, has its own forms of music and art. They help society by preserving identity and uniting communities, and they help individuals by reducing stress and building confidence.

Body Paragraph 1 · 99 words

Point One of the main benefits of music and art for society is that they preserve cultural identity. Explain Songs, paintings and dances record the history and values of a community, so they pass these on from one generation to the next. Example For example, traditional songs, such as folk and Baul music in Bangladesh, tell stories about village life, love, faith and struggle. Point Another important benefit is that music and art bring people together. Explain Festivals with music and dance bring communities together and strengthen social bonds. Link Consequently, music and art help to keep a society united and proud of its culture.

Body Paragraph 2 · 100 words

Point One of the main benefits for individuals is better emotional well-being in a busy and stressful life. Explain For individuals, art provides a way to express emotions, relieve stress and develop creativity. Example For instance, a student who paints or plays the guitar after a long day of exams may feel calmer and happier, which helps her sleep well and study better the next day. Point Another important benefit is greater confidence, especially for young people. Explain Learning an instrument or taking part in a drama group can build confidence and discipline. Link Consequently, the arts improve quality of life for people of all ages.

Conclusion · 33 words

In conclusion, music and art protect a society's identity and bring its people together. For individuals, they offer a healthy way to relax and express feelings, and they help people grow in confidence.

17. SOC-13 — Does travel make people more tolerant?

It is sometimes thought that people who travel outside their own country are more tolerant and understanding of others. To what extent do you agree?

Position	I completely agree.
Ideas from Idea Bank (Part 3)	Adapting to Local Customs and Cultural Tolerance · International Tourism: Benefits

Reused from Idea Bank	4 sentences (highlighted)
Word count	Intro 43 · BP1 107 · BP2 117 · Conclusion 35 · Total 302

Introduction · 43 words

It is often argued that people who visit other countries become more tolerant and understanding of others. I completely agree with this view because travel breaks down stereotypes and it also helps people to understand what it is like to be a foreigner.

Body Paragraph 1 · 107 words

Point The main reason why I agree with this idea is that travel breaks down stereotypes. Explain This is because meeting people from different backgrounds, seeing how they live and understanding their values can break down stereotypes and prejudices. Explain Travellers also learn that there are many different but equally reasonable ways of living, eating and worshipping; as a result, they become less quick to judge others. Example For example, a person who has only seen another country in films may be surprised to discover that its people are friendly and generous, and this experience can change their opinion for ever. Link Therefore, travel can certainly make people more tolerant and open-minded.

Body Paragraph 2 · 117 words

Point Another important reason for my agreement is that travel teaches people what it is like to be a foreigner. Explain When travellers struggle with unfamiliar rules, they learn how difficult life can be for newcomers, as a person who has experienced being a foreigner may become more understanding of immigrants and minorities in their own country. Example For instance, a student who needed help from strangers during a trip to Japan may later be kinder to foreign students at home, which makes their own community more welcoming. Response Although some people argue that some tourists spend their entire holiday in international hotels, most travellers still meet local people. Link Consequently, experience abroad is one of the best ways to build tolerance.

Conclusion · 35 words

In conclusion, I firmly believe that international travel makes people more accepting of others. Direct contact with other societies removes false ideas, and the experience of being an outsider also encourages greater kindness towards newcomers.

Introduction · 42 words

Many people believe that museums and galleries should display only the work of local artists and not art from other countries. I completely disagree with this view because international art helps people to understand other cultures and it also inspires local artists.

Body Paragraph 1 · 102 words

Point The main reason why I disagree with this idea is that foreign art teaches people about the wider world. Explain This is because international exhibitions help people understand other cultures and attract more visitors, which gives them a wider view. Explain Learning about other cultures can also help people become more open-minded and tolerant; as a result, society becomes more peaceful and respectful. Example For example, an exhibition of Japanese paintings in Dhaka could attract many visitors and show them a different way of seeing nature, and this experience could broaden their understanding. Link Therefore, showing only local work would narrow people's view of the world.

Body Paragraph 2 · 105 words

Point Another important reason for my disagreement is that international art also inspires local artists. Explain When young artists see work from other countries, they learn new techniques, because local artists sometimes combine Western styles with traditional elements, creating new and exciting forms of music, fashion and film. Example For instance, an art student in Dhaka who studies Italian paintings may use new ideas about colour in traditional designs, which creates something original. Response Although some people argue that museums should focus mainly on local artists and national history, foreign exhibitions do not stop local artists from being shown. Link Consequently, international art strengthens local culture instead of threatening it.

Conclusion · 37 words

In conclusion, I firmly believe that museums and galleries should not be limited to local artists. Work from abroad opens visitors' minds to other societies, and it also gives national artists fresh ideas for their own creations.

19. ART-05 — Should artists have total freedom?

Artists need a certain amount of freedom to develop their creativity. Some people think that artists should have total freedom to express any thoughts and ideas. To what extent do you agree or disagree?

Word count	Intro 38 · BP1 101 · BP2 100 · Conclusion 38 · Total 277

Introduction · 38 words

Although artists need some creative freedom, it is sometimes claimed that they should be free to express absolutely any idea. I completely disagree with this view because art can spread hatred and unlimited freedom can seriously harm children.

Body Paragraph 1 · 101 words

Point The main reason why I disagree with this idea is that art can be used to spread hatred between different groups. Explain This is because films, songs and books reach very large audiences, and they can have a strong effect on people's emotions and beliefs. Explain Some messages attack people because of their religion or race; as a result, whole communities can feel threatened and afraid. Example For example, a song that encourages violence against a religious group could lead to real attacks, and innocent people could lose their lives. Link Therefore, certain rules, such as laws against defamation and incitement to violence, are necessary.

Body Paragraph 2 · 100 words

Point Another important reason for my disagreement is that unlimited freedom can seriously harm children. Explain When violent or sexual content is freely available, young people can easily see material that is not suitable for their age. Example For instance, a child who finds an extremely violent film online may be frightened or confused by it, which can affect their emotional development. Response Although some people argue that artists need creative freedom to explore difficult and sometimes controversial ideas, they can do this without encouraging violence or harming children. Link Consequently, artists should not have total freedom, because other people's safety and dignity also matter.

Conclusion · 38 words

In conclusion, I firmly believe that artists should not have complete freedom to say whatever they want. Some works can create hatred between groups, and they can also damage young people who are not ready to see them.

20. BUS-07 — Local business or foreign companies?

Some countries encourage foreign companies to open in their country. Many people think that the government should focus on encouraging local business rather than foreign businesses. To what extent do you agree?

Essay type	Agree / Disagree
Position	I completely agree.

Introduction · 38 words

While some countries encourage foreign companies to open branches, many believe that governments should support local businesses instead. I completely agree with this view because local firms keep money in the community and they also protect local traditions.

Body Paragraph 1 · 110 words

Point The main reason why I agree with this idea is that local firms keep money in the community. Explain This is because they usually keep profits within the community, employ local people, use local suppliers, so the money circulates in the local economy. Explain In contrast, some foreign companies may exploit cheap labour, avoid taxes or damage the environment, especially in countries where regulations are weak; as a result, much of the benefit may leave the country. Example For example, a local restaurant owner who buys vegetables from nearby farmers keeps money in the area, while a foreign chain may send its profits overseas. Link Therefore, helping local companies makes the national economy stronger.

Body Paragraph 2 · 102 words

Point Another important reason for my agreement is that local businesses also protect local traditions. Explain When small companies survive, the country's culture survives with them, because they often preserve local traditions, such as traditional food, crafts and textiles. Example For instance, an international fast-food chain next to a local restaurant can attract customers away with its famous brand, which can slowly destroy a family business and its traditional dishes. Response Although some people argue that foreign companies create thousands of jobs, local firms can also create jobs if governments give them the same support. Link Consequently, governments should put local businesses first in their economic plans.

Conclusion · 35 words

In conclusion, I firmly believe that governments should give priority to local companies over foreign ones. Domestic firms keep wealth inside the country, and they also help to preserve traditional products and ways of life.

21. MED-12 — Why do people prefer foreign films?

Some people prefer to watch foreign films rather than locally produced films. Why is this? Do you think the government should spend more money supporting the local film industry?

Essay type	Double Question — List + Opinion (reasons + opinion)
Position	Bigger budgets and a fashionable image are the reasons; the government should spend more on local films.
Ideas from Idea Bank (Part 3)	Local Film, Music and Arts Industries · Western Influence and Global Popular Culture
Structure	Double Question guide (List + Opinion): Answer 1 + answer 2 → BP1 = Q1, List block (P E X P E L) → BP2 = Q2, Opinion block (P E X R L) → Both answers in new words
Reused from Idea Bank	3 sentences (highlighted)
Word count	Intro 36 · BP1 107 · BP2 101 · Conclusion 32 · Total 276

Introduction · 36 words

Many people now prefer foreign films to locally produced ones. This is mainly because foreign films have bigger budgets and seem more fashionable, and I firmly believe that the government should spend more on local cinema.

Body Paragraph 1 · 107 words

Point One of the main reasons for this is money. Explain International productions, especially from Hollywood and other large industries, usually have much bigger budgets, allowing them to use famous actors, advanced special effects and global marketing. Example For example, a Hollywood action film with expensive special effects may be shown in every cinema in Dhaka, while a low-budget local film is shown in only a few. Point Another important reason is fashion. Explain Young people who follow global trends on social media may see foreign entertainment as more fashionable; as a result, local films can seem old-fashioned to them. Link Consequently, many viewers choose foreign films without giving local ones a chance.

Body Paragraph 2 · 101 words

Point As for whether the government should spend more on the local film industry, I firmly believe that it should because local films protect a nation's culture. Explain Local films tell stories that reflect local people's lives, problems and dreams in their own language. Example For instance, a government grant could help a young director to make a film about a garment worker's life, which audiences abroad might also find moving. Response Although some people argue that public money should go to hospitals and schools instead, a small film fund costs little compared with these services. Link Therefore, the government should invest more in local filmmakers.

Conclusion · 32 words

In conclusion, foreign films attract more viewers because of their large budgets and fashionable image. I firmly believe that governments should fund local cinema because it keeps the nation's own stories alive.

22. MED-13 — Do foreign films harm local culture?

Some people think that foreign films have a negative impact on local culture. To what extent do you agree or disagree?

Essay type	Agree / Disagree
Position	I completely agree.
Ideas from Idea Bank (Part 3)	Western Influence and Global Popular Culture · Local Film, Music and Arts Industries
Structure	Agree/Disagree guide: Opinion + 2 ideas → BP1 Idea 1 (P E E X L) → BP2 Idea 2 (P E X R L) → Opinion + 2 ideas in new words
Reused from Idea Bank	0 sentences (highlighted)
Word count	Intro 43 · BP1 103 · BP2 106 · Conclusion 37 · Total 289

Introduction · 43 words

It is often argued that films from other countries have a damaging effect on local culture in many parts of the world. I completely agree with this view because foreign films change young people's values and they also weaken the national film industry.

Body Paragraph 1 · 103 words

Point The main reason why I agree with this idea is that foreign films change young people's values. Explain This is because Hollywood and other large film industries have huge budgets, so their films are often more exciting than local ones. Explain When young people watch these films regularly, they may copy foreign fashions, language and behaviour; as a result, local stories and traditions may receive less attention. Example For example, some teenagers in Bangladesh now prefer Western-style clothes and celebrations to traditional festivals, and this can slowly separate them from their own culture. Link Therefore, foreign films have a strong influence on how young people see themselves.

Body Paragraph 2 · 106 words

Point Another important reason for my agreement is that foreign films weaken the national film industry. Explain When local cinemas mainly show foreign films, local filmmakers lose audiences and income, so they have less money to make new films. Example For instance, a young Bangladeshi director may find that cinemas prefer an American action film to a local story, which makes it very difficult to continue working. Response Although some people argue that foreign films can increase tolerance and understanding, this benefit means little if a country's own stories are no longer told. Link Consequently, the national film industry needs protection, and foreign films remain a real threat to local culture.

Conclusion · 37 words

In conclusion, I firmly believe that films from abroad harm the culture of the countries where they are shown. They encourage teenagers to imitate foreign lifestyles, and they also make it harder for local directors to survive.
